BUSY STRONG 90

Get Strong. Stay Busy.

FIELD NOTES · CHAPTER ONE

Why every diet failed you.

It was never your willpower. It was the design.

Every diet you have ever tried was built for someone with time. Time to weigh food, log apps, prep six identical containers on a Sunday, and cook a separate meal from the children. You are not that person. You are a parent with a job, and the diet industry has never once designed for you.

So you start strong, white-knuckle it for three weeks, miss two days, feel like a failure, and quit. Then you blame yourself. Stop. The fault was in the tool, not the hand holding it.

This guide throws out calorie counting entirely. No apps. No scales. No guilt. It replaces all of it with one thing you already own — a plate — and a handful of rules simple enough to follow on your worst, busiest, most chaotic day. Because that is the only kind of plan that survives real life.

“The best diet is the one that still works on the day everything goes wrong.”

WHAT THIS GUIDE WILL DO

- ◆ Teach you the Plate Method — fat loss with zero counting.
- ◆ Show you how much protein you actually need (you are eating far too little).
- ◆ Give you 12 quick meals, each built in 15 minutes or less.
- ◆ Solve the family-dinner problem: one base, three plates.
- ◆ Fix what to eat around training, on the road, and in restaurants.

CHAPTER TWO

The Plate Method.

One plate. Four simple decisions. No numbers, ever.

Picture an ordinary dinner plate. Every fat-loss meal you build for the rest of your life is just four decisions about how to fill it. Learn this once and you will never need a tracking app again.

THE QUADRANT	FILL WITH	HOW MUCH
Half the plate	Vegetables — any kind, any colour	As much as you like
One quarter	Protein — meat, fish, eggs, dairy	One palm, minimum
One quarter	Carbs — rice, potato, bread, fruit	One cupped hand
Over the top	Healthy fat — olive oil, avocado, nuts	One thumb

That is the entire system. Half vegetables for volume and fullness. A quarter protein to protect your muscle and keep you satisfied. A quarter carbohydrate for energy. A thumb of fat for hormones and flavour.

Your hand travels with you — to restaurants, to hotels, to the in-laws' table. It is the only measuring tool you will ever need, and you can never leave it at home.

One carb rule, on the next page, makes this method twice as powerful.

CHAPTER THREE

Protein: you are starving it.

The single biggest mistake busy parents make with food.

If you change only one thing after reading this guide, change this. Most parents eat roughly half the protein they need. Protein is what protects your muscle while you lose fat, keeps you full for hours, and stops the 4 p.m. biscuit raid. Eat enough of it and fat loss stops being a fight.

THE TARGET

Roughly 1.6 g per kg of bodyweight.

YOUR BODYWEIGHT	DAILY PROTEIN	IN PALMS OF PROTEIN
60 kg	around 100 g	3 to 4 palms
75 kg	around 120 g	4 to 5 palms
90 kg	around 145 g	5 to 6 palms
100 kg+	around 160 g	6 palms

WHERE TO GET IT

Best protein sources for a busy life.

- ◆ Fast & cheap: eggs, Greek yoghurt, cottage cheese, tinned tuna.
- ◆ Batch heroes: chicken thighs, lean mince, whole roast chicken.
- ◆ On the road: beef jerky, a whey shake, a carton of milk, boiled eggs.
- ◆ Plant-based: lentils, tofu, tempeh, edamame, a pea-protein shake.

Coach’s Rule of Thumb

Every meal and every snack gets a protein anchor. If there is no protein on the plate, it is not a meal — it is just a snack pretending to be one.

CHAPTER FOUR

Carbs: timing beats cutting.

You do not need to fear carbs. You need to place them well.

Carbohydrates are not the enemy of fat loss — misplaced carbohydrates are. The fix is not to cut them out, which wrecks your energy and your training. The fix is to put them where your body will actually use them.

THE RULE

Earn your carbs around movement.

- ◆ Best time: the meal after you train. Your muscles are primed to soak carbohydrate up rather than store it.
- ◆ Also fine: breakfast, if you are a morning trainer or simply function better with carbs early.
- ◆ Keep light: late-evening meals on days you did not train — lean on protein and vegetables instead.

SMART vs LAZY CARBS

Same quarter-plate. Different quality.

REACH FOR THESE	GO EASY ON THESE
Rice, oats, potato, sweet potato	Pastries, croissants, doughnuts
Whole fruit, berries	Fruit juice, smoothies with no protein
Beans, lentils, chickpeas	Sugary cereal, flavoured yoghurt
Sourdough or rye bread	Crisps, crackers, biscuits

Note the smart column is not "low carb" — it is real food. You are not banning anything. You are simply choosing the version that keeps you full and steady instead of the version that spikes you and drops you an hour later, hungry and irritable in the school pick-up line.

CHAPTER FIVE

12 meals, 15 minutes each.

Every meal below is high in protein, built on the Plate Method, and fast enough for a weekday. No weighing. No special equipment.

BREAKFAST — three ways

The 4-Minute Power Scramble

Breakfast · serves 1 · 4 minutes

YOU NEED

- 3 whole eggs
- A handful of spinach
- Olive oil
- Salt, pepper

METHOD

1. Heat oil in a pan on medium.
2. Add eggs, stir gently.
3. Drop spinach in for the last 30 seconds.
4. Plate. Add fruit if you trained this morning.

PROTEIN — around 21 g

Overnight Protein Oats

Breakfast · serves 1 · 2 minutes the night before

YOU NEED

- 40 g rolled oats
- 1 scoop whey
- Milk or water
- Berries

METHOD

1. Mix oats, whey and milk in a jar.
2. Leave in the fridge overnight.
3. Top with berries in the morning. Eat cold, on the move.

PROTEIN — around 30 g

Greek Yoghurt Builder Bowl

Breakfast · serves 1 · 3 minutes

YOU NEED

- 200 g Greek yoghurt
- A handful of berries
- A thumb of nuts
- Honey, optional

METHOD

1. Spoon yoghurt into a bowl.
2. Top with berries and nuts.
3. A small drizzle of honey if you trained.

PROTEIN — around 22 g

CHAPTER FIVE · CONTINUED

Lunch — three ways.

Built to be made fast or carried in a container. Each one is a full Plate-Method meal.

The Real Fat-Loss Bowl

Lunch · serves 1 · 10 minutes

YOU NEED

- 1 palm grilled chicken
- 2 fists mixed salad
- Olive oil & lemon
- A cupped hand of rice

METHOD

1. Use pre-cooked chicken from your batch cook.
2. Pile salad into a bowl, add rice and chicken.
3. Dress with olive oil and lemon. Done.

PROTEIN — around 35 g

Tuna & White Bean Smash

Lunch · serves 1 · 5 minutes · no cooking

YOU NEED

- 1 tin tuna
- Half a tin white beans
- Olive oil, lemon
- Any salad leaves

METHOD

1. Drain tuna and beans.
2. Mix in a bowl with olive oil and lemon.
3. Serve over leaves, or in a wrap if you trained.

PROTEIN — around 32 g

The Big Batch Wrap

Lunch · serves 1 · 4 minutes

YOU NEED

- 1 wholewheat wrap
- 1 palm batch-cooked meat
- Greek yoghurt
- Grated veg or salad

METHOD

1. Spread yoghurt across the wrap as the sauce.
2. Add meat and vegetables.
3. Roll tight, cut in half, carry it with you.

PROTEIN — around 30 g

Dinner — three ways.

Family-friendly by design. The next chapter shows how to plate these three ways for parents and children at once.

One-Pan Chicken & Vegetables

Dinner · serves the family · 25 minutes, mostly hands-off

YOU NEED

- Chicken thighs
- Any chopped vegetables
- Potatoes
- Olive oil, herbs

METHOD

1. Heat the oven to 200°C.
2. Toss everything on one tray with oil and herbs.
3. Roast 25 minutes. One pan, no fuss, nothing to scrub.

PROTEIN — around 35 g per adult

15-Minute Beef Stir-Fry

Dinner · serves the family · 15 minutes

YOU NEED

- Lean beef strips
- A bag of stir-fry vegetables
- Rice
- Soy sauce, garlic

METHOD

1. Cook rice, or use a pre-cooked pouch.
2. Sear beef in a hot pan for 2 minutes.
3. Add vegetables and sauce, toss 3 minutes. Serve on rice.

PROTEIN — around 33 g per adult

Salmon Traybake

Dinner · serves the family · 20 minutes

YOU NEED

- Salmon fillets
- Broccoli, peppers
- Baby potatoes
- Lemon, olive oil

METHOD

1. Heat the oven to 200°C.
2. Spread everything on a tray, oil and lemon over the top.
3. Bake 18-20 minutes. Omega-3 and dinner in one tray.

PROTEIN — around 34 g per adult

Around training.

Three more meals — what to eat before and after you train, even on your most rushed day.

The Pre-Training Express

Pre-workout · 60 minutes before · 2 minutes

YOU NEED

- 1 banana
- 1 scoop whey
- A glass of water

METHOD

1. Blend, or simply eat the banana and drink the shake.
2. Light on the stomach, fast carbs to fuel the session.

PROTEIN — around 25 g

Post-Training Recovery Plate

Post-workout · within 90 minutes · 8 minutes

YOU NEED

- 1 palm of any protein
- A cupped hand of rice or potato
- Vegetables
- Olive oil

METHOD

1. This is simply a Plate-Method meal eaten after training.
2. This is the meal where carbs earn their place — use them.

PROTEIN — around 35 g

Emergency Car Snack

Anytime · 0 minutes · lives in your bag

YOU NEED

- Beef jerky
- A handful of nuts
- An apple or pear

METHOD

1. Keep this combination in your car or work bag at all times.
2. It is the difference between a protein anchor and a petrol-station pastry.

PROTEIN — around 20 g

CHAPTER SIX

One base, three plates.

Stop cooking separate meals. It is the fastest way to give up on nutrition — and on your sanity.

You do not need a different meal for yourself, your partner, and the children. You need one base of plain ingredients, plated three ways. Cook once. Adjust the proportions at the table. Everyone is fed, nobody is short-changed, and the kitchen sees one set of pans.

THE BASE

Cook these four things, plain.

- ◆ One protein — chicken, beef, fish or eggs.
- ◆ One carbohydrate — rice, potato or pasta.
- ◆ Two vegetables — whatever is in the fridge.
- ◆ A healthy fat on the side — olive oil, butter, avocado.

THE THREE PLATES

Same base, plated for each body.

THE PLATE	HOW TO BUILD IT
Fat-loss parent	Big protein, big vegetables, small carb, a thumb of fat. The Plate Method, exactly as Chapter Two describes it.
Strength / active parent	The same plate, with a more generous carb portion to fuel training and speed recovery.
The children	Same protein, a larger carb portion, a smaller vegetable serving, plus a sauce or a little butter so it actually gets eaten.

One pan. One meal. Three nutrition profiles. No arguments at the table, and no second dinner to cook once the children are in bed.

CHAPTER SEVEN

On the road, in restaurants.

The Plate Method does not stay home. Five rules carry it anywhere.

A busy parent eats out, travels for work, and grabs food on the move. That is not a problem to feel guilty about — it is just a situation to have rules for. Here are five.

- ◆ Find the protein first. Read any menu protein-first — grilled chicken, steak, fish, eggs. Build the meal outward from there.
- ◆ Double the vegetables. Ask for a second portion of vegetables or salad in place of fries. Most kitchens say yes without blinking.
- ◆ Sauce on the side. Dressings and sauces are where hidden calories live. On the side, you stay in control of how much.
- ◆ Drink your calories carefully. Water or a diet drink with the meal. Liquid calories fill nothing and add up fast.
- ◆ The petrol-station rule. Boiled eggs, jerky, nuts, milk, fruit, a yoghurt. A solid protein meal exists in almost any service station.

Coach's Travel Truth

You will never be perfect on the road, and you do not need to be. Aim to get the protein anchor and the vegetables right. That alone keeps you 90 percent of the way there — and 90 percent, repeated for years, is how bodies actually change.

CHAPTER EIGHT

The 60-minute Sunday.

One hour on Sunday removes a hundred small decisions from your week.

This is not full meal prep — nobody sustains six identical containers forever. This is base prep. You cook the building blocks once, then assemble fast all week using the meals in Chapter Five.

MINUTES	TASK
0 - 10	Oven on. Tray of chicken thighs in, seasoned. Walk away.
10 - 25	Cook a big pot of rice. Hard-boil 6-10 eggs alongside.
25 - 40	Chop raw vegetables for the week. Store in clear boxes.
40 - 50	Brown a batch of lean mince. Portion into containers.
50 - 60	Pack the car kit: jerky, nuts, fruit, whey. Refill it.

When Sunday is done you have protein cooked, rice ready, eggs boiled, vegetables chopped, and a car kit stocked. Every meal in this guide is now an assembly job of a few minutes — not a cooking job you have no time for.

“You do not rise to your goals. You fall to your level of preparation.”

CHAPTER NINE

Five lies about eating.

The myths that keep busy parents stuck. Retire them today.

"Eating late at night makes you fat."

Total daily food is what matters, not the clock. A sensible Plate-Method dinner at 9 p.m. is not a problem. A second helping of dessert is — at any hour.

"Carbs are the enemy."

Misplaced carbs are. Carbs around training fuel you and aid recovery. The enemy was never the rice; it was the timing and the portion.

"Skipping meals speeds fat loss."

It usually backfires. Skip lunch and you arrive at dinner ravenous, with no protein anchor and no plan. Skipping meals tends to add food, not remove it.

"Healthy food is expensive."

Eggs, oats, tinned fish, frozen vegetables, rice, lentils, whole chicken — some of the cheapest food in any shop. The expensive aisle is the processed one.

"I have to be perfect or it does not count."

Perfect is the enemy of consistent. Getting it right 80 percent of the time, for years, beats getting it perfect for three weeks and then quitting.

THE LAST PAGE

The whole guide, in nine lines.

If you forget everything else, keep this. Tape it inside a kitchen cupboard.

- ◆ Half the plate is vegetables. Always.
- ◆ A palm of protein at every meal and every snack.
- ◆ A cupped hand of carbs — best earned around training.
- ◆ A thumb of healthy fat on top.
- ◆ Your hand is the only measuring tool you need.
- ◆ Cook one base, plate it three ways for the family.
- ◆ On the road: protein first, double the veg, sauce on the side.
- ◆ One 60-minute Sunday removes a hundred weekday decisions.
- ◆ Eighty percent, repeated for years, beats perfect for three weeks.

You have the nutrition handled.

Now pair it with the training that makes it count.

The full 90-day system lives inside the Busy Strong 90 app.

3 workouts a week. 22 minutes each. Demonstrated, scheduled, done for you — nutrition guide included.
